Postmodernism in 30 Minutes

Image: Richard Hamilton, Just What Is It That Makes Today's Home So Different, So Appealing? (1956, Collage)

What is (was?) Modernism?

- 1. Early 20th-century aesthetic movement (esp. 1910-30): TS Eliot, Virginia Woolf, James Joyce, Marcel Proust, Franz Kafka, etc.
- 2. Rejected Victorian notions of art: its purposes, its formal features, and its relationship to its audience
- 3. Emphasizes individual experience and perception (impressionism); concern with how the world is experienced (rather than what the world is). Think stream-of-consciousness writing.
- 4. Movement away from fixed narrative points of view, like omniscient "all seeing, all knowing" narrators.
- 5. Interest in blurring the boundaries between poetry and prose: less obviously distinct than they once were
- 6. Interest in fragmentation and collage
- 7. An emphasis on self-reflexivity: the work of art draws attention to itself as a work of art
- 8. Blurring of the boundaries between popular art forms (photography, advertising, later film) and 'high art' categories

What is Postmodernism?

- 1. Later 20th-century aesthetic movement, ongoing now
- 2. Rejected Victorian notions of art: its purposes, its formal features, and its relationship to its audience
- 3. Emphasizes individual experience and perception (impressionism); concern with how the world is experienced (rather than what the world is). Think stream-of-consciousness writing.

- 4. Movement away from fixed narrative points of view, like omniscient "all seeing, all knowing" narrators.
- 5. Interest in blurring the boundaries between poetry and prose: less obviously distinct than they once were
- 6. Interest in fragmentation and collage
- 7. An emphasis on self-reflexivity: the work of art draws attention to itself as a work of art
- 8. Blurring of the boundaries between popular art forms (photography, advertising, film, digital media) and "high art" categories

So What's the Difference?

Modernism

- laments fragmentation and disorder as decay
- art offers a respite from the perils of life in a mass society

Postmodernism

- celebrates bricolage and pastiche as play
- art is helpless, but fun!

Enlightenment Ideas

- 1. I have a stable and coherent self who is rational and universal
- 2. I know the world through reason and rationality
- 3. I produce objective truth or "science" that isn't constrained by me
- 4. This truth is what leads to progress and improvement
- 5. Reason, truth, and "the good" are synonymous
- 6. Science is the best application of my rationality: it is neutral and objective and unbiased
- 7. Language is how rationality is expressed and its discoveries communicated; it is "transparent" and can objectively represent the reality or the world (think photography)

- 8. There is no difference between objects in the world and the words used to name them in language
- 9. These premises stand behind and support EVERYTHING: democracy, law, ethics, and aesthetics

Back to Our Question: What is Postmodernism?

- 1. a challenge to order
- 2. a dismantling of enlightenment ideas behind modern culture
- 3. the end of "master narratives" the grand stories we tell ourselves about ourselves and our culture: Progress; Science; Rationality; God
- 4. the recognition of small, provisional kinds of knowledge
- 5. no stable rational self observing the world
- 6. self is fragmented and doesn't understand its own ways of operating, has a deep psychology that splits it into many bits and parts
- 7. the observing self influences the creation of "knowledge" (the observer effect; Schrödinger's cat experiment)
- 8. language doesn't "represent" reality; it constructs it and construes it
- 9. no necessary relationship between words and the objects they name
- 10. all culture and information is positional; it isn't necessarily "subjective" but it isn't objective and entirely "true" and universal either
- 11. Human identity is positional too; it isn't natural and "true"; it is a performance, a putting on of a COSTUME that isn't a disguise: The consume IS ALL THERE IS

Sources:

Witcombefont, Christopher L. C. E. "Modernism and Postmodernism." 2000. http://witcombe.sbc.edu/modernism/modpostmod.html

Klages, Mary. "Postmodernism." 2003. http://www.colorado.edu/English/courses/ENGL2012Klages/pomo.html